

Name: _____

Date: _____

When Frankenstein Was Just a Kid

SPELLING WORKSHEET

Underline the correct spelling
of the words in parentheses

When Frankenstein was just a kid,
he ate his greens. It's (troo, trew, true). He did!
He ate his (spinach, spinich, spanich), salads, peas,
asparagus, and foods like these,
and with each leaf and lima (bean, been, bein)
his skin (became, became, becaym) a bit more green.

On chives and chard he loved to (choo, chue, chew),
and Brussels sprouts and peppers too,
until he (ate, eight, ait) that fateful bean
that turned his skin completely green.
He turned all green, and (staid, stayed, staed) that way,
and now he (fritens, frightens, frytens) folks away.

Poor Frankenstein, his (tale, tail, taile) is sad,
but things need not have been so bad.
It's (fair, fare, faire) to say, if only he had (eatin, eating, eaten) much less celery,
avoided cabbage, ate no kale,
why, then, we'd have a (difrent, different, diferent) tale.

So, mom and dad, I'm here to say
please take these (vegetables, vegetables, vectibles) away
or my fate could be just as grim.
Yes, I could end up green like him.
So, mom and dad, (before, befour, beefor) we dine,
please give a (thot, thaught, thought) to Frankenstein.

— Kenn Nesbitt