The Leaves Are Falling Off the Trees

Read this poem and answer the questions below.

The leaves are falling off the trees.
It's fun to watch them whirl.
It only takes the slightest breeze
to make them swoop and swirl.

They twist and spin, they dip and dance.
Their flights are acrobatic.
They do this yearly, not by chance;
instead, it's autumn-matic.

— Kenn Nesbitt

- What season is the poem talking about?

- What are the leaves doing in the poem?

- What causes the leaves to move and swirl?
