from this poem in the Word Search puzzle.

I made a new snowman
out in our front yard.
It didn't take long and
it wasn't too hard.

I stacked up some snowballs.
I gave them a pat,
then threw on a scarf,
and a pipe, and a hat.

I sculpted some feet
from a little more snow,
and stuck in some sticks
where his arms ought to go.

I added some coal
for his buttons and eyes,
and that's when he spoke,
to my utter surprise.

He said to me, "Thanks for the hat, scarf, and pipe.
The sticks that you picked are exactly my type."

"Now bring me some carrots.
You picked all my clothes,
but really, I don't want you picking my nose."
